CPS HR Consulting and IPMA-HR Team Up to Provide Employee Engagement Survey

SACRAMENTO, Calif. – Feb. 2, 2017 – CPS HR Consulting is partnering with the International Public Management Association for Human Resources (IPMA-HR) to provide employee engagement services to clients in the public sector through the recently launched CPS HR Consulting Institute for Public Sector Employee Engagement™.

This agreement between the two organizations paves the way for IPMA-HR and CPS HR to offer agencies the institute's engagement survey, which is designed specifically for the public sector. CPS HR will conduct the survey and work with government jurisdictions and agencies to develop strategies to enhance employee engagement.

"IPMA-HR recognizes the positive impact that improving employee engagement can have on public agencies," said Neil Reichenberg, executive director of IPMA-HR. "We are pleased to partner with CPS HR Consulting on this important effort."

Bob Lavigna, director of the institute, is leading the charge along with Janelle Callahan, principal consultant of the institute. CPS HR created the institute to help improve organizational performance in government through enhanced employee engagement.

"Employee engagement is critical to performance and service delivery, particularly in government," said Lavigna. "When employees are engaged, they go above and beyond the basic job requirements to help the organization achieve its mission. The best way to measure employee engagement is through an employee survey."
